CEPAD highly recommends that you prepare your group for better understanding the context of Nicaragua and the work of CEPAD within that context. There are many and varied resources below for you to use with your delegation. Please reach out to us if you haven any questions.

Doing Good...Says Who? By Connie Newton - here

The Human Farm by Katie Smith beautifully captures the spirit of CEPAD, especially with its Christian foundation and its emphasis on training, empowerment and organizing, how CEPAD helps people help themselves. It is an easy read that tells the story of a Honduran farmer and teacher. It is out of print and does not have an electronic version, but check with your local library to see if they have a copy.

When Helping Hurts and Toxic Charity should be required reading for each team. Discussing a chapter as a team before arrival to Nicaragua is a helpful way to begin a group conversation. If it is too late in you planning to do this, the following article should be prioritized reading: Staying for Tea by Aaron Ausland.

To begin a discussion on how your gifts, financial and otherwise, can be understand, the Power of Empty Hands is an article writing by the director of mission for the PCUSA and should be considered required reading.

The wikipedia article on Nicaragua is also very good.

Some CEPAD staff have read and can endorse Blood of Brothers: Life and War in Nicaragua, which focuses on Nicaragua in the 1970's and 1980's, and Nicaragua, Living in the Shadow of the Eagle (5th edition). Both are long, but are worthwhile.

Culture and Customs of Nicaragua by Steven F. White and Esthela Calderon has also been read by CEPAD staff and is a good overview to Nicaragua, even though it was published in 2006. Though it can be found on Amazon, it is very expensive, so we recommend checking with your local library or second-hand bookstores.

Ruben Dario is arguably the greatest Latin American poet and is Nicaraguan. Here is a New York Times article about him and the importance and prevalence of poetry in Nicaragua. You can find some of his poetry here; they are, of course, much better in Spanish.

Ernesto Cardenal is one of the most famous living Nicaraguan poets. Here is a good NPR piece on him, with video of him reading poems, and here are a couple of poems that speak of life in Nicaragua.

A very different approach would be to consider the Nicaraguan author of international fame, Gioconda Belli, whose The Country Under My Skin: a Memoir of Love and War, would not typically be a choice for some church groups, but may warrant consideration.

The following are varied in their content:

- Nicaragua: Surviving the Legacy of US Policy
- My Car in Managua
- Dark Alliance
- · Life is Hard: Machismo, Danger, and the Intimacy of Power in Nicaragua
- Adios, Muchachos
- Meet Me Under the Ceiba
- The Monkey's Bridge

For the very studious (and resourceful, because these will only be found in libraries), the syllabus below, is graciously shared with permission from the chaplains of Davidson College:

JOURNEY TO NICARAGUA February 28- March 8, 2015 Course Syllabus

Taken together, the following readings will begin to open us to aspects of the reality (or better, realities) that we will encounter in Nicaragua. These new realities may challenge us to rethink our notion of the "real world."

Accompanying this syllabus, you will receive several books and copies of the weekly readings. Please commit yourself to doing the readings for each week. It is more than a way to increase your own experience of our journey; it is a sign of respect for the Nicaraguans who will go out of their way to host us in the spring.

You will notice that each week includes the following assignment: "Daily Romero Reading." You are to read a small selection (perhaps just 1-2 entries) from the collection of sermons and writings of Oscar Romero contained in the compilation of his works, The Violence of Love, ed. James Brockman (Farmington, PA: Plough Publishing House, 1988). These daily devotional readings will set the tone for how God might work in our lives through this trip.

Also, note that the artwork in our reading binder is from public murals in Nicaragua, and/or from Philip and Sally Scharper, eds. The Gospel of Solentiname in Art by the Peasants of Solentiname. Maryknoll, NY: Orbis, 1984.
